Des Trute

Guest speaker Thomas Lee didn't turn up, so Rotarian Des Trute stepped up, on very short notice, and gave us an insight into his early unusual duties in his first year of service as a Policeman. On a particular Friday night and Saturday he was directed to go to a station where he was not known, wearing plain clothes and focus on illegal activities such as S P bookmakers, prostitutes and illegal gaming. Des shared with us some of the ways this was carried out, including his having to work with a police officer of Dutch descent who didn't seem to understand his duties. Des's various stories had members giggling picturing the "old ways" of doing things!

Des being thanked by David

Three Minuter - Alyson Hulley-Jeffries

Alyson's three minuter involved a description of their daughter Elisabeth's academic life so far. Liz was educated at St Pat's in Cooma then at Narrabundah College in the ACT where her love of theatre was the focus. After finishing at college, she undertook study in sound engineering at the Canberra Institute of Technology. Not long before finishing that course though, Elisabeth decided that she wanted to take on something that would challenge her brain a bit more and enrolled as a mature age student at ANU, her first preference at that time being linguistics. As time passed, she realised that her real passion was history and especially northern European archaeology. By the third year of her BA, she was successful in being chosen for an exchange to the University of Oslo, where she enjoyed her first 'dig' at a Viking farmstead in north east Iceland. Since then she has been back to Australia to finish her BA, traveled back to the UK where she worked for the Oxford Archaeology Unit and spent time managing a pub in Cambridge. Most recently she has been completing a thesis for her Master of Science in Osteo-archaeology at Sheffield University in Yorkshire, her special interest being the study of infant and juvenile skeletons in the 11th - 12th Century Viking habitation of north west Iceland. Elisabeth will be home for Christmas, but is hoping to return to Europe - hopefully Iceland or Norway if a Ph D offer comes to fruition. Yet another case of Cooma kids making the world their oyster!

Thought of the Week - David Libauer

It is only when one reads what men wrote long ago, that one realises how absolutely modern the best of the old things are.
